Somerset Nursery employees spent the winter months working their brains in anticipation of the spring season. Three full time employees participated in a minimum of 100 classroom hours attending classes and seminars including the Certified Horticulturalist Program through Penn State University

In addition to the Certified Horticulturalist program, the employees also attended a 3 day seminar at the Scotts Training Institute where they learned everything the home owner needs to know about lawn and garden fertilization, weed control and grass seeding. Local seminars regarding plant and shrub identification and pruning were also attended.

“Employee education is the key to great customer service,” states Maria Jacobs, owner, Somerset Nursery. “through education, we can provide our customers with accurate and knowledgeable information to help them make the best decisions regarding their home landscape.”
